Creation of jobs for seniors at temple guesthouses: Turning Kamakura into a tourist attraction that meets world standards

Do you know the world standard for the number of inbound tourists?

United Nations World Tourism Organization (UNWTO) defines tourism as staying at a tourist destination for at least 24 hours. A total of 22.93 million tourists visited Kamakura in the last fiscal year. Most of the tourists were day-trippers, and those who stayed for over 24 hours amounted to 344,000 people (1.54%), which is an extremely small percentage. We think that there is a major difference in the total amount of tourist spending depending on whether the tourists stay for over 24 hours or not. Average per capita tourist spending amounts to ¥6,702 (day-trippers) and ¥20,229 (tourists who stay for longer than a day), which is a

This page is public.

A31_03_25_鎌倉_minamoto_Kamakura ¥13.527 difference.

Considering these facts, we believe that turning Kamakura into a tourist attraction that meets world standards by popularizing the idea of staying at temple guesthouses will lead to further development of tourism. Furthermore, opening temple guesthouses increases the number of employment opportunities,

① Reasons for opening temple guesthouses

There are a total of 172 shrines and temples in Kamakura, which includes 121 Buddhist temples, although many of them do not offer lodging. The reason for this is thought to be that the temples also face various problems, for example, shortage of staff, tools, and food supply. However, if these issues are resolved, offering temple lodging is feasible. We would like to contribute to the urban development of Kamakura by opening temple guesthouses to take advantage of this historical resource through cooperation with the city of Kamakura, NPO Minamo, Buddhist temples, senior residents, and restaurants. We will set up a new urban development project for the enrichment of local communities as a step toward becoming an ageless society.

② Why hire seniors?

On average, 70% of the elderly people in Japan wish to work even if they are over 65-years of age. Actively employing seniors, who wish to work, will allow them to have a second life and will lead to an increase in labor force participation in Kamakura. Furthermore, the government proposed a "work-style reform." Hiring seniors that are capable and willing to work may lead to the realization of the idea of an ageless society where people can continue working regardless of age based on a fair work capability assessment.

3 Future prospects

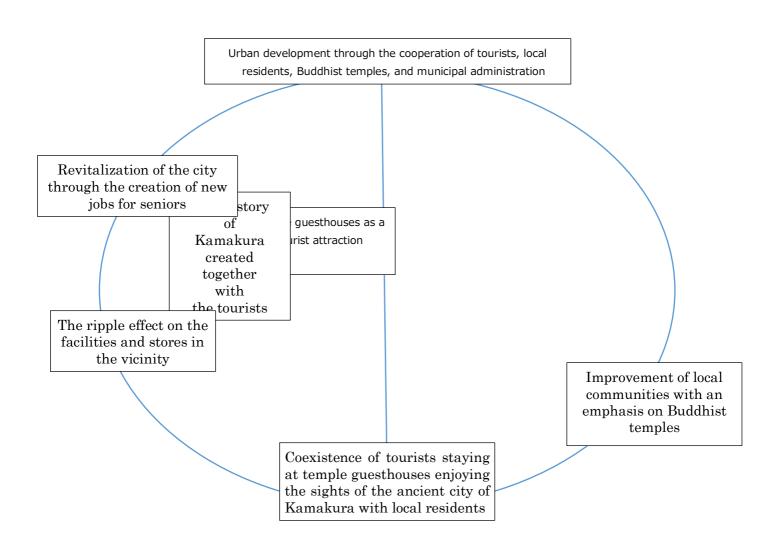

We believe that the development of tourism through the popularization of temple guesthouses and an increase in the employment A31_03_25_鎌倉_minamoto_Kamakura of seniors will make Japan a model case and Kamakura will develop to meet the world standards of tourism.

(2) Rationale for the idea

Describe the rationale for the idea (why have you chosen this idea?) with numerical data (achievements, statistics, or questionnaire results) and evidence (materials, plans, or existing measures) that support the idea (collectively, the "data").

The current state of Kamakura

① Population-related problem

While the proportions of the population under 14 years of age and the working age population (15–64 years of age) are in decline, according to estimates of the National Institute of Population and Social Security Research on the future trends by age group, the proportion of the aging population over 65-years of age is increasing, and the birthrate is expected to decline even further. As the trend in Japan toward an aging society with declining birthrate is expected to manifest itself in Kamakura to a certain extent, the municipal administration should be prepared for a prolonged decline in regional vitality and tax revenues.

② Current labor force participation rate among seniors

Currently, 37.2% "are not working," and the overall labor force participation rate among seniors is 55.0%.

(3) Desire to find employment

According to the results of a survey questionnaire on employment among seniors conducted in A31_03_25_鎌倉_minamoto_Kamakura Kamakura, 37.7% of the respondents "would like to work," and 21.7% "would like to work if possible," thus indicating that overall 59.4% of the respondents want to work. Considering that they wish to keep working, we think that there is a great demand for work. Furthermore, as 62.1% of the respondents who expressed their wish to find employment preferred to work "in Kamakura," we think that employment at temple guesthouses in Kamakura is a viable option for seniors.

④ Current employment

Although seniors' demand for employment is strong since they "have extensive experience and knowledge" (37.2%), and because of factors such as the "shortage of human resources" (22.7%), available employment is limited by the potential needs of employers. Furthermore, since many of the enterprises in Kamakura are small and medium-sized, there are few job offers that meet seniors' needs such as "easily accessible workplace" and "work in Kamakura." Therefore, it cannot be argued that there are enough job offers for seniors.

⑤ Regarding tourists

The number of tourists visiting Kamakura amounted to 22.93 million in fiscal 2015, but the majority of them were day-trippers, whereas only 1.54% (344, 000) of the tourists stayed in the city for longer than a day. Per capita spending by tourists amounted to $6,702 (day-trippers) and $20,229 (tourists who stayed for longer than a day).

- ① Lodging Expenses: the sum of average rates at each lodging facility multiplied by the number of guests at each facility
- ② Entrance Fee to Tourist Attractions: the sum of entrance fees at paid facilities (including temples and shrines)

What the tourism industry needs in the future

According to population projections for Japan, the population is expected to decrease by 8% in 2030 and by 15% in 2042, compared with the population in 2015. Furthermore, domestic tourist spending is expected to decrease at a similar pace. It is expected to decrease by 11% in 2030 and by 19% in 52%. To maintain or increase tourist spending in the future, regardless of the number of tourists, it may be necessary to take wide-ranging measures toward improving the "quality" of tourism.

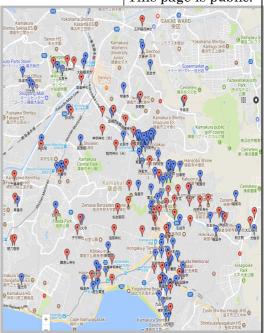

① Creation of jobs for seniors

Opening temple guesthouses is thought to create more jobs not only for the guesthouse staff, but also in places such as restaurants and bathing facilities. To secure growth amid a decreasing labor force, it is necessary to provide diverse employment opportunities for seniors who are willing to work, and by popularizing the idea of "staying at a guesthouse," we can expect the development of a new Kamakura.

(3) The process of the implementation (open to public)

Please write about who will implement the idea, necessary resources (human resources, physical objects, money) and realistic ways of obtaining them (including solutions if there are constraints), the overall process leading up to implementation and milestones within 2 pages. (Charts and tables can be included if necessary.)

- ① Fundraising
- · Raising funds via crowdfunding

This idea uses existing temples as lodging facilities, but regarding other capital investment, the initial investment will be covered via crowdfunding. In return, the investors will receive preferential lodging. Furthermore, the following can be expected as the byproducts of crowdfunding.

The idea will gain publicity

As the mechanism of crowdfunding utilizes the Internet, it can be used not only for raising funds but also to make the idea appeal to the general public, thereby making it easier for local residents to become involved. Thus, it is possible to attract customers and fans before implementing the idea.

· Reduction of fiscal burden

In the case of businesses that are highly publicized or that contribute to regional revitalization and to the improvement of the living environment, part of the costs associated with company activity are subsidized, but crowdfunding leads to a reduction of the fiscal burden.

② Human resources

• Setting up an inquiry counter utilizing government inquiry counters

Creation of inquiry counters by the government. An inquiry counter was set up at the Silver Human Resource Center where inquiries from seniors and companies are handled. We aim to increase the number of workers by increasing the number of consultees through the expansion of the scope of counseling to planning for the life ahead without limiting it to work-related subjects. At the counter, we will prepare a talent pool of seniors who wish to find employment.

We will create and distribute flyers including information regarding the efforts undertaken by Buddhist temples, and human resources as well as the general information about the lodging, including contact information for inquiries.

· Fostering human resources

This project requires knowledge about Kamakura, which has a culturally- and historically-rich background.

Therefore, we will use a systematic training of human resources such as holding seminars for improvement of their professional skills and giving practical assignments cosponsored by the city administration.
